With his dexterous hands and love for bamboo, Zhang Yong-wang has turned bamboo weaving into an approachable work of art. He lived in the bamboo forest when he was a child, and grew up in a bamboo-weaving family. He is the fourth-generation successor. In view of the decline and disappearance of bamboo weaving skills in today's society, he takes the promotion of bamboo weaving as his mission, hoping to promote and develop the art of bamboo weaving in order to create another trend. There are rough, meticulous, simple and trendy works in the works, which are not only practical, but also artistic for valuable collection. He also improved the traditional bamboo weaving, brought the bamboo weaving products that had no market value back to the stage of daily life, and found a new way out for bamboo weaving. The skill is approachable to the majority, which makes bamboo weaving closer to our life.

At present, in addition to working with the government, communities and other units to jointly improve local tourism resources, a "Mr. Zhang's Hundred Bamboo Garden" has been set up in Guanmiao, Longqi, Tainan, where bamboo is produced, to develop outdoor installation art, interior decoration, bamboo ecology, bamboo environmental protection, etc. Multi-party cooperation to jointly develop the international market.
